

ASHTON-TATE NEWS

ASHTON-TATE READIES dBASE MAC TO SHIP IN AUGUST

Torrance, Calif., July 30, 1987 -- Ashton-Tate today announced that dBASE Mac, its relational database for Apple's Macintosh personal computers, is now in its final test and debugging development stages, and is anticipated to ship by August 31, 1987.

The company has completed necessary performance improvements, added functionality to the product, and has added support for the Mac II.

Ashton-Tate will be demonstrating dBASE Mac at MacWorld Expo in Boston August 11-13, and will be sponsoring hands-on seminars for developers at the World Trade Center during the show.

R

dBASE Mac is a registered trademark of Ashton-Tate Corporation.

 ASHTON-TATE
20101 Hamilton Avenue
Torrance, California 90502-1319
(213) 538-7312

MEMORANDUM

TO: All Ashton-Tate Employees
FROM: Luther Nussbaum. LN
DATE: July 30, 1987
RE: dBASE Mac

Ashton-Tate today announced that dBASE Mac is now in its final test and debugging development stages, and is anticipated to ship by August 31, 1987.

We've successfully completed necessary performance improvements, added functionality to the original product specs, and have added support for the Mac II.

As a reminder -- our media policy remains the same. If you receive calls from the press regarding dBASE Mac, please direct them to Judy Merrill in the Public Relations department, ext. 7321.

Thank you.