A Community Memory system, with terminals located in shops, galleries, and meeting places that attract large artists clientele, could provide a very immediate way to provide information to people "on-demand". I'm not an artist, and I'm only slightly familiar with the Foundation's work, but here are some of my thoughts on Community Memory's usefulness to the Foundation and to artists.

Types of arts information that might be on the system:

- * notices about services to artists -- legal, housing, etc.
- * events calendars -- openings, shows, exhibits, classes
- * news about competitions, grants, scholarships
- * political notices
- * discussions about any of the topics above

Here are the ways that I think Community Memory can strengthen the work of the Foundation, and help the arts community:

-  CM can provide an outlet for the Foundation's data base of arts information

Anyone with a large collection of information faces the necessity of either printing a directory which will soon be out of date, or setting up a "telephone switchboard" which eats up salary resources. Community Memory makes constantly updated information available to people when they need it, without diverting staff time.

-  CM will provide another way for the Foundation to gather input from artists

Community Memory is a two-way medium. Anyone can respond to messages on the system. The Foundation can use this feature to solicit opinions from the users of Community Memory. Among other uses, the information that people contribute to the Community Memory database can provide input the Foundation's newspaper.

-  CM can provide an outlet for other arts organizations

Other arts organizations have calendars, resource lists, and notices that they want to make available to artists. Community Memory will also provide a means for this information to reach its audience. The Foundation will be providing a service to both the other arts groups, and to the artists who use the system.

-  CM will enhance low-cost artist-to-artist communication

We assume that artists have many reasons to need to reach each other -- to share resources such as space & equipment, to find collaborators, to organize politically, and to communicate also as individuals. Community Memory facilitates these exchanges. In particular, it lets people who share needs, but who don't know each other, find each other. Placing a notice on Community Memory will cost far, far less than placing a classified ad.

 CM will enhance the Foundation's reputation as a provider of community services

Community Memory is still a novelty -- only one other Community Memory system exists in the country. Installing a CM system is a newsworthy event, we have gotten frequent coverage in local papers. Over time, operation of the system will also attract the attention of the users to the Foundation.
