Abstract

The Charles Bourne papers, ranging in date from 1947 to 2016, consist of materials related to Bourne's pioneering career in the database and information retrieval industry, including his work at Stanford Research Institute (now SRI International), UC Berkeley, and Dialog Information Services. The collection contains Bourne's personal project files, which include papers, presentations, and other activities related to his professional work. The collection also holds Bourne's subject files on a range of topics, many of which supported the writing of Bourne's books, including organizations developing search systems, people working in the field, and database suppliers. Biographical/Historical Note

Charles (Charlie) Bourne is an information scientist and engineer who is a pioneer in information retrieval services. He specializes in areas such as search and information retrieval systems, library analysis, automation and evaluation, and natural systems.

Born in San Francisco on September 2, 1931, Bourne grew up in Los Gatos, California. After graduating from high school, Bourne enlisted in the Marine Corps Reserve, where he spent several years on active duty and worked as an instructor. In August 1953, he married Elizabeth Scheidtmann and started courses at the University of California, Berkeley (UCB), in the School of Engineering. Bourne received a BS in Electrical Engineering with a specialization in Computers from UCB in 1957 and an MS in Industrial Engineering, specializing in computer technology, from Stanford University in 1963.

From 1957 to 1966, Bourne worked as a research engineer at the Stanford Research Institute (SRI) in their Computer Systems Lab. He then spent five years in private industry, working as a vice-president at Information General Corporation as well as consulting in the information industry. From 1971 to 1977, Bourne worked as a professor at the School of Librarianship and Information Studies at UCB. During this time, he was also the director of the Institute of Library Research at the university. Beginning in 1977, Bourne began working at Dialog Information Services, initially as a project manager and eventually as Vice President of the General Information Division. He worked there until 1992.

For much of his professional career, Bourne also worked as a consultant for libraries, schools, academies, and government institutions. Clients of note include the Stanford University Libraries, UNESCO, National Academy of Science, Library of Congress, National Agricultural Library, US Patent Office, United Nations, and Central Intelligence Agency. Most of his work as a consultant involved evaluating, developing, and upgrading information systems, serving on advisory panels, and working to increase access to information through improving technical information services in developing countries.

Bourne is the author or co-author of several books, including Methods of Information Handling (1963), which won the American Documentation Institute (ADI) Book-of-the-Year award, Technology in Support of Library Science and Information Service (1980), and A History of Online Information Services, 1963-1976 (2003), which won the Association for Information Science and Technology (ASIS&T) Book-of-the-Year award.

Bourne has also received a number of awards for his professional accomplishments. He was a recipient of the ADI/ASIS&T Award of Merit in 1965, was named a Pioneer of Information Science by ASIS&T in 1987, and was honored by the National Federation of Abstracting and Indexing Services for "Achievement in the field of Information Science and Distinguished Service to the Federation" in 1999.

Scope and Content of the Collection

The Charles Bourne papers consist of materials related to Bourne's pioneering career in the online and database industry, including his work at Stanford Research Institute (SRI), UC Berkeley, and Dialog Information Services. Ranging in date from 1947 to 2016, the collection traces Bourne's career as well as his interest in documenting information about computer-searching systems, organizations active in the field, and people who worked in the industry.

Roughly a third of the collection consists of Bourne's personal project files, which include papers, presentations, and other activities related to his professional work. These include records from his jobs at Berkeley, SRI, and Dialog, as well as files from his consulting work for various universities, government departments, and national organizations. There is a separate series related to these materials, Series 2, "Unpublished writings and related research material," which consists primarily of background research documents for two planned books that never saw publication.

The bulk of the collection is made up of Bourne's subject files on organizations and systems, people, and database suppliers. This group of records contains reports, instruction manuals, internal reports, and clippings about organizations active in developing computer-based search systems as well as stand-alone computer search systems. There are also files on organizations that were related to, but not directly engaged in, computer-based searching. Many of these materials were used as research for his book, A History of Online Information Services, 1963-1976. The papers also include subject files on people that Bourne worked with or heard about over his career. This portion of the collection contains articles and publications about or by these people, as well as correspondence, meeting notes, and some images and recordings. Also included in the subject files are records on database suppliers, which hold documentation about and by organizations that were making their computer-based databases available for computer searching.

Additionally, the collection includes Bourne's technical library, which consists of about fifteen linear feet of publications relevant to Bourne's computer and information science interests, including serials, conference proceedings, and individual reports and books.

Collection Contents

Series 1, Personal projects files, 1957-2007, bulk 1961-1980

This series collects much of the work that encompasses Bourne's entire career. The bulk of the series is made up of sponsored or professional activities such as papers both published and unpublished, studies and projects Bourne participated in, evaluations of information retrieval systems, presentations made at conferences, activities as a panelist for various societies and organizations, and consulting work. There is also a small collection of activities unrelated to Bourne's professional work, such as materials related to his serving on a civil grand jury.

A note on the chronological ordering of this series: rather than arrange the series in a way that is neatly chronological so groupings of year spans neatly precede the next (i.e. 1967-1968, 1969-1970, etc.), Bourne's original order has been maintained. As a result, though each grouping begins with a year identical to or earlier than that grouping which follows it, there is considerable overlap in the time sequencing of grouped folder sets. For example, 1967-1968 is followed by 1967-1969, and this is followed by 1968-1972. Groupings have been described at the folder level, and each grouping's contents is listed in their respective descriptive note.

Finally, it should be noted that a small number of records were lost due to neglect, mold, and/or other damage. When available, these gaps have been noted in the descriptive note.

Series 2, Unpublished writings and related research material, 1952-1995, bulk 1961-1984

The bulk of this series contains research material assembled from Bourne's professional activities, as well as his pedagogical activities as a teacher at UC Berkeley and instructor at various library and information science workshops. The materials are mostly collected under subject headings that comprise chapters of two planned manuscripts. One of these manuscripts made it to a draft which is included, and is titled, "Cost Analysis of Library Operations."

Series 3, Biographic files, 1948-2014

This is a series arranged alphabetically by the last names of people who Bourne either worked with or otherwise considered his peers over the course of his professional career. Included are images of some of these people, correspondence with them, publications, and recordings. It should be noted that while some files contain exhaustive documents about a person's life and work, others contain only a bibliographic note or some other small reference.

Series 4, Organization/system files, 1947-2007, bulk 1953-1992

This series consists of materials related to stand-alone search systems, the organizations active in the developing or supporting of computer-based bibliographic search systems, and organizations which were related to these developments in a non-manufacturing capacity (e.g., professional societies and database suppliers). Included are reports, instruction manuals, internal reports and memoranda, and clippings.

Note that organizations and the search systems they produce are often described together in this series, separated by a hyphen (i.e. NASA – LISR, University of Illinois – REQUEST).

Series 5, Database supplier files, 1958-1999, bulk 1961-1982

This series contains reports, instruction manuals, correspondence, and internal reports and memoranda related to the organizations that made their computer-based databases available for computer searching in the early days of navigational databases. While the files in this series are arranged alphabetically and the names of the supplier organizations are usually the names of the original database developer, the names associated with subsequent acquisitions or the company names which have otherwise changed are not noted as such. It is also worth noting the DIALOG folders contained in this series provide descriptions to many of the databases that make up the series.

Series 6, Technical library, 1953-2004, bulk 1958-1980

This series consists of a collection of publications assembled by Bourne that he considered relevant to his computer and information science interests. Included are books and technical reports written for trade journals, and the proceedings and papers written for conferences that Bourne attended over the course of his career.

Series 7, Image system samples, undated

This series is made up of a collection of physical forms that serve as samplings and representations of the working implementations of various manual image storage and retrieval systems. Included are microform film stock, microform images on positive card stock, images on negative film stock (i.e. microfiche), and aperture cards.
