Stanford Artificial Intelligence Laboratory
Dump and Restore Technique

Contents

About one million PDP-10 files are potentially available here. Since some authors believe that these files were deleted twenty years ago, there is access control so that files are released either with the author's permission or fifty years post mortem.

By Programmer ID code. There are 1768 such codes. Some ID codes were used by different persons at different times, some codes were used by groups of people.

By Date. Although the SAIL computer celebrated 25 years of operation (6 June 1966 through 7 June 1991), the first DART tape was written on Saturday 5 November 1972 and the last tape on Friday 17 August 1990, an 18 year span of 6494 days. New files were created on 6460 of those days. During the six years prior to DART, permanent files had to be kept off line, mostly using DEC tapes.

File Formats :

1. Exact SAIL data :

An arrangement of the 36-bit PDP-10 words into 40-bits that almost looks like ASCII text when the original data was a SAIL text file; and which permits faithful recovery of every bit of SAIL binary files. The bit arrangement of the PDP-10 data is to pack the 36-bit words into five 8-bit bytes. Starting from the big end of the PDP-10 word, take five PDP-10 Stanford 7-bit characters and place each right adjusted into five 8-bit bytes; then inclusive OR the remaining lone bit (the lowest order PDP-10 bit #35) into the 0x80 position of the fifth byte.

Although I thought about using the extra 4 bits (which are now all zeroes) for error detection and correction; I haven't gotten around to it (would someone suggest an algorithm?) - and most likely the MD5 hashing of the SAIL objects with numerous copies of the whole archive is a sufficient defense against long term bit deterioration.

2. SAIL text in .HTML format, with UTF-8 encoding.

Encodings :

Here explain the SAIL version of ASCII, then Unicode and UTF-8.

Charsets : ISO-1xxxx

Fonts :

The various browsers of 1998 do not readily provide a monospace unicode font - since monospace unicode is almost an oxymoron.

Media :

The principal digital archival media of 1998 are tape, CD and SCSI disk. Next year (1999) there is DVD and FC disk and yet another generation of tape technologies. Placing small marks on paper and/or silicon has been suggested as a digital media that could transmit down the centuries - if the reading mechanism is assumed obvious to future intellectual entities. Perhaps Altavista, or Brewster Kahle (www.Alexa.com and www.Archive.org), or IBM, or the NSA are archiving every byte now a days. I have spoken to people from these specific potential digital archives - and none are doing what I would like to see done for the SAILDART data.

Chronology

1966 to 1991 Twenty five years of SAIL computer operations.

1972 to 1990 Eighteen years of DART tape recordings, serial numbered 1 to 2984.

1988 to 1990 First baton pass :

Marty Frost copied the almost three thousand reels of low density seven track tape into 229 reels of higher density nine track tape, serial numbered 3000 to 3228.

1998 Second baton pass :

Bruce Baumgart (with the help of Frost, Earnest, Nagle and McCarthy's grad student whoes name I have forgotten momentarily) copied the 229 reels of the DART 3000 series (via external disks) to DLT-IV tape cartridges. Only a single DLT cartridge is needed to hold the archive at model 7000 density, a pair of cartridges suffices at model 4000 density. The SAILDART data fits on some forty (40) ordinary CD compact disks (format ISO 9660 Joliet) - such CD disks use to be slower to read than DLT tape (and are much slower to write even using a 4x speed writer), but the CD readers are ubiquitous, the media is cheaper than tape, and so as a long term archival strategy, writing to CDs is a viable approach.

APPENDIX 7

STANFORD CHARACTER SET

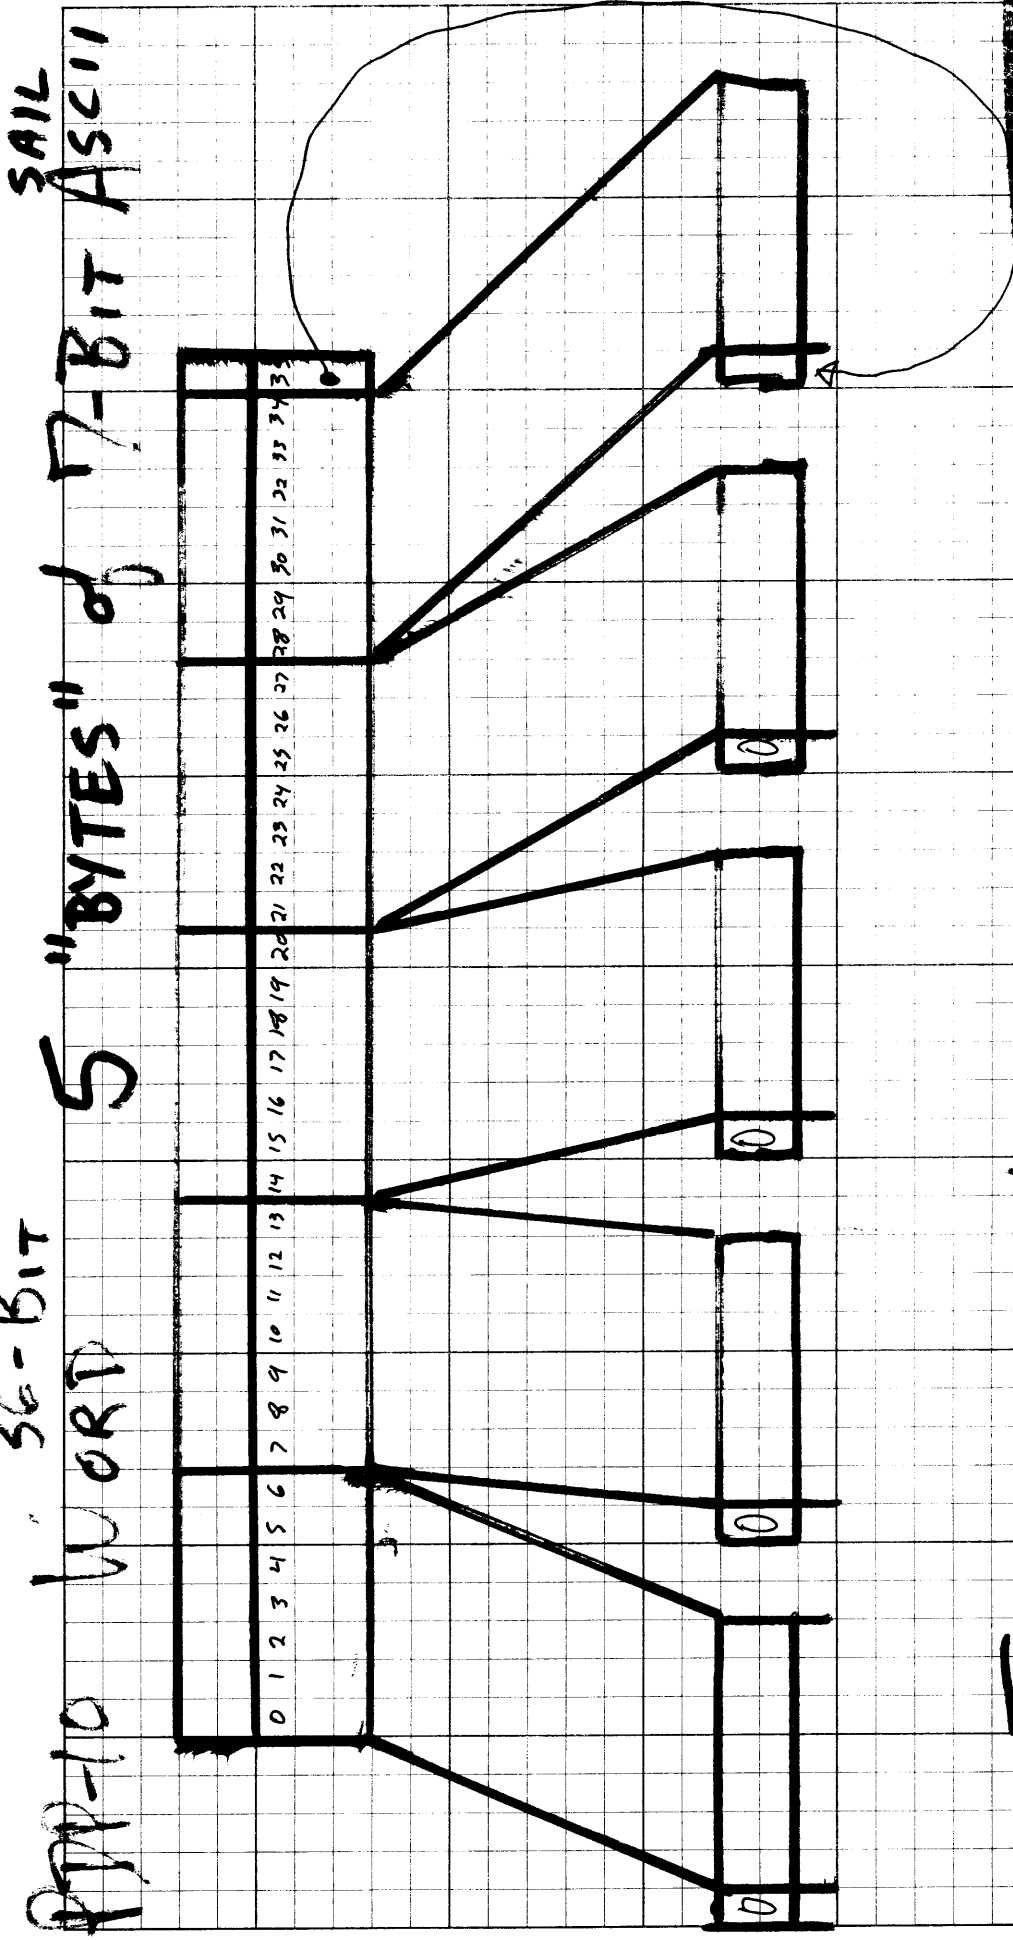

The table below gives the octal codes for characters in the Stanford ascii character set. The octal code for a character is three digits and is obtained for a character in the table by adding the label of the character's row to the label of the character's column. For example, the ascii code for "G" is 100+7, or 107.

To get the sixbit code for a character, find the ascii code and subtract 40. Note that the only characters with sixbit representations are those with ascii codes in the range 40:137.

The abbreviations used for special characters in the table are explained below.

	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
000	NUL	↓	α	β	^	¬	ε	π
010	λ	TAB	LF	VT	FF	CR	∞	∂

050	()	*	+	,	-	.	/
060	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
070	8	9	:	;	<	=	>	?
